Oh that our people would hate sin as they do an extra collection.

Nasal Catarrh Is a dangerous disease. From its tendency to extend to the throat, bronchial tubes, and finally to involve the lungs in consumptive diseases, it should be promptly cured, that these grave dangers may be averted. No confident are the manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy of their ability to cure successfully with this very prevalent disease, that they have for years offered, in good faith, $500 reward for a case of catarrh, no matter how long it had existed, how many years standing, which they cannot cure. Remedy only 50 cents, by druggists.

Parents, try it and let your little ones have a fair chance for life.

A Scrap of Paper Saves Her Life. It was just an ordinary scrap of wrapping paper, but it saved her life. She was in the last stages of consumption, told by physicians that she was incurable and could live less than seventy pounds. On a piece of wrapping paper she read Dr. King's New Discovery, and got a sample bottle; it helped her, she bought a large bottle; it helped her more, bought another and grew better still, continued its use and is now strong, healthy, rosy, and weighs 140 pounds. Parents Criminally Liable. More than half of all deaths occur before six years of age. An army of innocent, lovely children are swept needlessly away each year. Parents are criminally responsible for this. The death rate of children in England is less than half that of America. Acker's English Baby Soother has done more to bring this about than all other causes combined. You cannot afford to be without it.

"The letter board of life goes up." "The letter board of life goes down." Up and down, up and down—one day a millionaire, next day "dead broke"—one day buoyant in spirits, next day gloomy as a frog—one day in seeming perfect health, next day "fired out" with bilious attack or your stomach "on a strike." This is the way the world wags now-a-days. If you are bilious, melancholy, dizzy headed, dyspeptic, want appetite, or have torpid action of liver, kidneys or bowels, take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets—purely vegetable, perfectly harmless; one a dose.

Too Much for the Mosquitoes. W. A. Sanders thus expresses himself in defense of a tree upon which there has of late been a disposition to open warfare: "I have more of these trees (eucalyptus) growing than can be found anywhere else in the San Joaquin valley—great monsters 120 feet tall, containing over a cord of wood each, growing from seed in the next ten years. You can see my eucalyptus groves from the cars of the Southern Pacific railroad from Goshen to Fowler, a distance of over twenty miles. I wish to add a fact to your recommendation of this tree—a fact too important to be overlooked. The eucalyptus globulus, when grown in large quantities, gives entire exemption from mosquitoes. Here in my groves I have a dense shade, a big, sluggish ditch that is always full of water, and in all of our prolonged summer and autumn heat never a mosquito, while among the willows of King's river, two miles away, they swarm at times in clouds and literally devour their unprotected victims."—Tulare (Cal.) Register.

An Ample Excuse. In an uptown church last Sunday evening, when the pastor had got well into his sermon, he noticed an unusual commotion among the choir, at his right. He tried to ignore it, but the trouble became so lively that he felt it his duty to rebuke the singers in a loud voice. The disturbance finally quieted down and the services proceeded with due dignity. A member of the choir managed to communicate to the music post pastor the cause of the disturbance before the services were concluded. It was a mouse—a little mouse. But with the perversity of its kind, this little mouse had managed to get under the skirts of one of the ladies. The good pastor forthwith explained to the congregation that the trouble had been unavoidable—that no blame attached to the choir.—Baltimore Courier.

The Lantern Slide. In proportion to the skill and labor involved in its preparation, the lantern slide confers greater pleasure upon the amateur photographer than is embodied in any product of the camera and dark room. It and its counterpart, the transparency, are sources of an enjoyment in which profit to the artistic sense forms a very large percentage. The manipulation of the lantern slide calls for simpler processes than is the case with the negative destined for the making of prints, and these processes can be carried on successfully with less care as to the light employed. The slide is pre-eminently calculated to give satisfaction to the amateur whose home appliances for developing are not of the best. Once made and ready for the lantern, the slide is an epitome of prints. The flood of light poured through the transparent glass and the image thereon becomes, upon the screen, a life size picture, possessed of a fidelity and clearness of detail that a Meisssonier could hardly hope to equal. In this form the slide appeals to the eye with a potency no print can possess, and stands next to nature's self in reproducing the beauties of a landscape, the charm and majesty of the ocean, the subtle power of architecture and of sculpture, or the portraits of men and women loved and esteemed by their fellows, or of childish beauty caught unerringly by the instantaneous process.

There is no end to the variety of charm possessed by this form of photographic art, and the rapid increase of interest among amateurs in this direction, must make the lantern slide a dominant feature in the art. The establishment of the International exchange for the encouragement of lantern slide exhibitions, vastly widens the scope of this adjunct to amateur photography. The portability of the slide renders it available in this direction. A hundred slides can be sent half way around the globe, to show forth, at the distant point, the scenes familiar to the eyes of the senders, yet so novel and interesting to the recipients. The dweller in Calcutta can look upon a life size portrayal of the most interesting establishments of Pittsburgh, and episodes of social life in the East End can be laid before the members of an amateur society in Paris, or Berlin, or Vienna.—Pittsburgh Bulletin.

Author Murray. A gentleman who has just returned from a six months' residence in London, where he spent much of his time among the literary men, has some interesting gossip to tell concerning one or two of the novelists which will bear repeating. Speaking of David Christie Murray, the author of "Val Strangely," "Joseph's Coat," and numberless other stories, he said: "Murray is one of the most interesting men in London. He has had the hardest of work to attain his present position. From boyhood he has made his way unaided and like many other writers of fiction he came up from newspaper work, and his early journalistic training has been of inestimable value to him. After working for a long time on the Birmingham News, he resolved to see London, and arrived in the city with but little to keep body and soul together. While casting about for some road to fortune he wrote an article on "Impecunious London," which was printed in one of the weeklies and served to open a new field of work to him. The paper, it need hardly be said, was founded upon his own experience, and its success encouraged him later to set out on an extended tour as an amateur tramp. To put it into his own power to enjoy creature comforts he mailed a bank note to the care of a post office nearly 100 miles away and started to walk to it. He had not a penny to buy lodging or food, he stopped at many of the poor house hotels which lay on his path, and he had a bit when nothing else would secure food in true tramp style, and, arriving at the longed for postoffice, secured his money and revelled in luxurious comforts. He is a member of the Savage Club, London, and one of its shining lights."—Philadelphia Times.
